Pathfinder for Native American Resources

"As keepers of a rich and ancient cultural heritage, Native Americans share with all of us the beauty of their art, the power of their songs and the grace of their people," President Clinton said in a National American Indian Heritage Month proclamation on November 9, 2000. "As individuals, they have distinguished themselves in virtually every field, from the arts to the sciences, from the world of sports to the world of commerce."

This pathfinder is intended for the use of teachers and students in their search for web sites for information about the Native American. The types of resources are varied. They include lists of tribes across the United States, information about Texas tribes, information about current problems of the Native American, as well as historical information.

The Native American culture is to be used as a starting point for multicultural research in history classes. It has good resources for a beginning experience in a class of high school students. It is important for students to know this information as a basis for and an extension of their historical perspective of America. It is important to know this information to develop sensitivity to other cultures that surround us in our everyday life. This study will produce more informed students and citizens in our society.
